History of a Small-town Newspaper: The St. Helena Star

By Kathy Kernberger

Many St. Helena citizens were surprised recently to learn of the sale of the Star to the Pulitzer Publishing Company, which also owns the Napa Valley Register. In its current location on Main Street since 1900, the St. Helena Star symbolized the stereotype of a small-town newspaper. Since it was founded in September 1874, its main focus has been local news. Who was going where, doing what, what new businesses were moving into what buildings, and whose rooster was waking up what neighbors with his loud crowing. Other papers have come and gone, sometimes in the space of only a few months. The Star survived.

First publisher of the Star was Dewitt C. Lawrence. A. Clock bought the first paper off the press for $20. Lawrence ran the paper until 1876, when he sold to Charles A. Gardner. The Lawrence family moved to Oakland where Dewitt published the West Oakland Press, and where he went bankrupt in 1880. Some might have remarked that he should have stayed in St. Helena, where he was successful.

Next publisher was Charles A. Gardner. Son of Charles and Annice Gardner, he was born August 22, 1842 in Middleport, Illinois. In 1860, the family moved to California and Charles A. also began to practice law and work for newspapers. These included the Sacramento Union, Democratic Press (Sacramento) and the Anaheim Gazette.

In 1872, he moved to St. Helena and bought a 50-acre vineyard and half interest in the Napa Register. He sold his interest to partner George Francis and bought the Star in February of 1876. With a short break in 1878, when the paper was leased to N.A. Morford, Gardner operated the Star until 1884 when he sold to Willis MacKinder. Gardner and his family next moved to Pomona where he bought and operated another newspaper. By 1891, ownership had passed to Willis' brother, Frank, who constructed the building in which the Star has been housed since June of 1900.

The lot for the building, 34 x 75 feet, was purchased from Miss Calderwell and D.O. Hunt. On February 6, 1900 ground was broken for the foundation according to plans drawn by Napa Architect, W.H. Corlett. He also acted as construction superintendent for the project. Head stonemason for the two-foot thick walls was R.H. Ritchie. Stone for the front of the building came from the Tubbs property on Howell Mountain. That for the back and side walls came from the Jursch Quarry near St. Helena. By the end of the month, the cornerstone was laid. This event was described by the Star as "an event of little monument to the community." Into the tin box for the cornerstone went: the St. Helena Star (Feb. 16, 1900); Napa Daily Register (January 25, 1900); Pope Valley Herald (a defunct paper); a small flag; business cards from many different people; and a list of the men who worked on the building, including W. Kennelly and Frank Guigni. Star foreman and former editor H.E. Prouty contributed the Pope Valley Herald. The box was laid into the cornerstone with MCM (Roman numerals for 1900) cut into the side. The stone was "leveled" and Mrs. F.B. MacKinder struck the stone with a mallet, declaring that it was well and truly laid. Simon Harrison did the interior work (except for painting, plumbing and "tinning"). Rammers & Son did the painting, while J.H. Steves took care of plumbing and "tinning." Millwork of pine was done by Corlett Brothers and plastering by F. Morris.

The two large arched windows were of French plate glass with an open arched entrance between them. Inside to the left was the Star office. Special attention had been given to lighting the area and it was claimed that there was no better lit printing office in the state. To the right, was the real estate/insurance office of W.A. MacKinder. The post office, with F.B. MacKinder as postmaster, was centrally located in the interior of the vestibule. Mailboxes were made of oak and surrounded the general delivery and money order offices.

Today, the newspaper offices occupy the entire building. Sadly, that will not continue to be as the building was not sold with the paper. Local citizens have expressed concerns about the future of the building. When the Star Building was opened in June of 1900, it was described as having "convenience combined with beauty." Certainly, the term "beauty" continues to apply, over a century later.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Welcome to the second issue of the St. Helena Historical Society Electrolier! This past quarter was a busy one. A number of new donations were added to our collections (see the list on p.3), the Hidden Treasures antiques event was held on May 25th at the Krug Winery, the first exhibit of Society materials was held at the St. Helena Library (eighteen editorial cartoons by Joan Martens) and general membership meetings were held at two local historically significant sites including the Lewelling House and the White Sulphur Springs Resort. Our Collections Committee kept busy and the planning for our November 1st tour of the St. Helena Cemetery continues.

On a down note we are losing our membership chairperson, Arlene Lamb. Thanks Arlene for all your hard work! Arlene and her husband are building a new home in Lake County. We wish them great success in this project and many happy years in their home when it is completed. Anyone who is interested in becoming the new membership chairperson for the Society is encouraged to call me at 967-2805. Please, we need a membership chairperson! Volunteer!

The re-design of the second floor of the St. Helena Public Library continues and is nearing completion. When finished the new space will house archival stacks, the office for the Library's archivist, the St. Helena Historical Society computer (for photo scanning, newsletter preparation, forms generation and more), a conference table and reading space for archives users. A public access PC for viewing the photo collection is also being planned. Please note that the archives are available by appointment only with archivist Chris Kreiden (963-5244 x104).

Our web site can be found at: www.shstory.org. Check it out for the latest information on Society activities, events, acquisitions and volunteer opportunities. During the past quarter we put on it a number of photos of recent events and a virtual version of the Joan Martens exhibit which was held at the Library in June, 2003. If you have any suggestions as to what additional information should be on the Web site please send them to me.

Currently we have three volunteers working on our photograph collection. Frank Harrison, Kathy Kernberger and Susanne Salvestrin are all scanning and preparing various photographs of St. Helena and its families. All have been working hard and we hope to start making these photographs available in the near future.

The St. Helena Library is purchasing PastPerfect which is a highly regarded museum collection management software package. It will be installed on the archivist's computer and available through the SHHS computer as well.

Finally, we can always use new members! We can always use more donations of money! We can always use more donations of materials! We can always use more volunteers! Thanks!

Larry Hlavsa, President

P.S. October 7th, at 4:30pm our General Membership meeting will be at the Vine & Fig Tree Farm, 2455 Sulphur Springs Ave. Join us at this special meeting place. Watch the Web site for details.
